

1. Everyone on this earth incarnates with a predestined chart of events. You created this chart for yourself before you came into this life.

2. "How" you get to these predestined outcomes is the variable aspect. There are pathways that are more difficult than others if you choose them.

Your reader will be able to tune into your chart and tell you what upcoming life events are in store. She will describe some of the different pathways available to you, and let you know which choices will lead to the easier or more difficult paths.

3. When your life events involve the actions of others, timing can be affected.

4. You're life events move as fast as you do your own "homework."

Everyone has lessons to learn. Events in our lives are written-in to teach us those lessons. We cannot move to the next until we learn the first. Therefore, if we stubbornly refuse to learn the first lesson, it can delay new events in our lives that will teach us the next. I call this "homework."

Psychics offer timing of events as best as they can see them, but keep in mind why and how timeframes can be thrown off.

There are no such things as curses!

5. There are no such things as curses

6. Psychic readings shouldn't be scary

An easy way to spot a fraud is if a psychic tells you it will cost $XX to remove a curse. There is no such thing as a curse. Period! All information comes from God. It is truly a gift that is given to the reader and to you. It is a reminder that you are never alone and that God is always with you to provide guidance. If you are scared, not connecting or have a bad feeling about a live psychic reading, then simply walk away. You'll find that reputable psychics are extremely compassionate and have a way of making clients feel at ease.

7. Have questions prepared before your reading

8. Do not expect lottery numbers

Having prepared questions before your live psychic reading will ensure your satisfaction. Certain topics can eat up session time. You may walk out wishing you had remembered to ask about this or that. A prepared list will prevent this from happening. Also, remember that information given to you is that which God wants you to know. If you are destined to win the lottery, your psychic will tell you. .. but if she knew the lottery numbers, she'd buy herself a ticket first! 9. It's okay to give your reader information.

10. No psychic is 100% accurate.

Many people come to a live psychic reading with the objective of proving the reader a fake. This is not a healthy way to go into a reading. Psychics are still imperfect human beings like everyone else and can sometimes get certain information wrong. A psychic should give you enough details of your current situation to let you know she has made a connection. These details should make you feel confident that the future events she sees are accurate and make sense.

Don't be afraid to give your reader clarification or more details "if" she asks. Asking you for more information allows her to dig deeper into the situation for more details. It assures that your session time isn't taken up by her telling you things you already know.

You should always feel that your psychic is more right than wrong. If she is consistently more wrong than right, then consider a new reader.

Every psychic has their own way of conducting sessions.

One is not necessarily better than another but sometimes you have to try a few psychics to see what feels comfortable. If you do not feel you're getting what you need then just communicate with your reader on the spot. A reputable psychic will do her best to accommodate
